Submission: 3 Minutes World Silence

By Mary Cassini

3 Minutes World Silence takes place every January 1st at 11.00 a.m., local time. The message of the World Silence is for every one of us to remember the future and to wish for peace.

The purpose of this time of silence is to reach the conscience of people everywhere over the course of 24 hours and to consider our inherent relationship to each other and to our earth.

I initiated this simple event late in 1983. The first World Silence was held on January 1st 1984.

In 1986 I travelled worldwide to publicise the event. It was officially accepted by the (then) Soviet Union as a positive way to join the western nations in forging new relationships.

Over the years the 3 Minutes World Silence has encompassed many different cultures and beliefs, and has been endorsed by world leaders. The Federal Parliament hosted an exhibition for the event 1989/90.

As a global “thinking-time”, especially as people are awakening to the reality of climate change, this event helps to remind us all of our personal responsibility to each other and to our earth.

3 MINUTES WORLD SILENCE
1st January

www.worldsilence.com
The 3 Minutes World Silence takes place each January 1st at 11 o'clock in the morning, local time. Its message is for every one of us to remember the future and to wish for peace.

Founded in 1983 by Mary Cassini, a weaver and actor, the first World Silence took place in Pike's Brewery, Oakbank, South Australia, at the eleventh hour on January 1st, 1984.

To tell everyone about the World Silence, Mary wrote letters to many people worldwide. In 1986, with her husband, Peter Stapleton, she travelled around the world to tell people about the event. The journey included the USA, UK, Scandinavia, Europe, the former Soviet Union, Pakistan, India, and China. The idea was universally supported for our children and for the future of mankind.

In 1987, Mary was invited by the International Theatre Institute in Russia to take part in Mikhail Gorbachev's "Moscow Forum for Human Survival," and in December, 1989, her initiative received front-page coverage in the Russian newspaper "Pravda."

Exhibitions mounted for the World Silence include a large blue fibreglass globe, lighting up the world's 36 time zones. Prepared by students of Birdwood High School, South Australia, this globe, accompanied by an historic "Book of Letters," has been displayed in many places, notably in Parliament House, Canberra, and in 1990/91 in Jewish and Arab areas in and around Jerusalem.

"Footsteps," a soundscape to celebrate the World Silence, was composed by Ros Bandt in 1991. Premiered on the Australian Broadcasting Corporation's ABC FM station on 1st January, 1992, this composition has been broadcast on many radio stations worldwide.

Nearly 25 years ago an Oakbank couple had the idea of a three-minute silence for world peace.

Now their idea has spread around the world, helping to raise awareness about the plight of people in regions ravaged by war or natural disaster.

It began in 1983 when Mary Cassini and her husband Peter Stapleton took part in a peace vigil in Victoria Square, Adelaide.

The vigil ended with the group holding hands as the town hall clock chimed 11am.

"I felt a powerful surge of positive energy through the linked hands," Ms Cassini said.

"I went home, and over the next few days developed the idea of a united silence for the world."

The couple held their first World Silence on January 1, 1984, then started to write to world leaders, asking them to hold a similar event in their countries.

In 1986 the couple travelled around the world, including to the US, UK, Europe and Asia, to help spread the message.

"In East and West, the idea was universally supported for our children and for the future of mankind," Ms Cassini said.

The following year she was invited to attend the Moscow Forum for Human Survival.

World without frontiers

In 1987 the couple had a large fibreglass globe made with the help of Birdwood High School students, to highlight the message more strongly.

It shows major cities and time zones, but not country boundaries.

Lights come on in sequence, as each time zone reaches 11am.

The globe has been displayed in many Australian venues, including Parliament House, Canberra, and also Jewish and Arab areas in and around Jerusalem.

"We're trying to get the whole world together to join in understanding and hope," Ms Cassini said.

"Our website is visited by people from all over.

"The aim is to encourage more people to think of the future and wish for peace.

"We think it is making a difference, by raising awareness of troubles in other parts of the world."

Since starting the World Silence, Ms Cassini has had letters of support from two Popes, the late King Hussein of Jordan, the British Foreign and Commonwealth Office, also the International Crisis Group representing 80 countries.

A 15-minutes audio 'Footsteps' composed by Ros Bandt includes sounds from around the world has also been broadcast on many radio stations each January 1 – with the final sound being Adelaide's chimes.

Until early next year the globe will be on display in the visitor information centre at Mt Lofty Summit.

Dear Miss Cassini,

His Holiness Pope Benedict XVI has received your letter and has asked me to thank you. He appreciates the sentiments which prompted you to write to him about your on-going work for peace.

The Holy Father will remember you in his prayers. He invokes upon you God’s abundant blessings.

With every good wish, I am

Yours sincerely,

Dear Ms Cassini,

Thank you very much for your kind letter of 10 October inviting the International Crisis Group to participate in your 3 Minutes World Silence on 1 January 2004.

As I promised last year, I will propose to my colleagues at the International Crisis Group to observe the three minutes of silence that you have advocated for over the last two decades.

Best of luck with your continuing and generous efforts for this noble cause.

Yours sincerely,

WORLD HEARS OUR CHIMES

The clocktower bells of Adelaide GPO helped radio listeners in many countries to commune in thought on New Year's Day. The bells chimed through 36 time zones around the world.

It was part of a well established annual event. In 1983 Mary Cassini, of Oakbank, South Australia, initiated the concept of Three Minutes World Silence - a global union of thought focussed on the future, with a wish for peace.

The first World Silence was in 1984. Mary's idea has since been acclaimed by leading individuals and notable organisations in a number of countries.

Melbourne composer Ros Bandt was commissioned by Mary to create a "soundscape" composition to complement and underline the concept for this year's broadcast. The work included fireworks from Spain, boats in Italy and France, bells from Munich, Germany, a human heartbeat and various contributions from Australia including - as a finale - the sound of the Adelaide GPO bells.

The latter correspond to the chimes of Great St Marys in Cambridge and the Houses of Parliament in London, both in Britain. These are said to ring out the words:

"Lord in this hour, be thou my guide. Kept by thy power, no foot will slide."

Adelaide GPO clocktower (and bells) - helped radio listeners around the world to commune in thought.

Dear Mary Cassini

Thank you for your letter of 24 November 1989.

During my term as Prime Minister I was pleased and proud to support the 3 Minutes World Silence campaign. I will continue to support this worthy cause in the future.

The kind sentiments expressed in your letter were much appreciated.

Yours sincerely,

David Lange
Mr JOHN SCOTT (Hindmarsh)—I would like to convey to the House, to you, Mr Speaker, and to the President of the Senate the sincere thanks of Mary Cassini for the assistance given in allowing her to present the three minutes world silence exhibition in the new Parliament House. Mary Cassini initiated the three minutes world silence in 1983 and was able, with the help of the Speaker, the President and others, including Senator Bolkus, Senator Jo Vallentine, Mr Alexander Downer and Mr Peter Duncan, to have the three minutes world silence exhibition held in Parliament House. Mary Cassini has asked me to convey her thanks, and says:

It is with deep thanks to this Parliament that I address this House. Thank you for your far-sightedness in allowing the '3 minutes world silence' exhibition to take place in Parliament House over the New Year. Over the three days nearly 16,000 people, visitors from many countries, saw the exhibition and noted its message. Some already knew of the World Silence. Others went away with hope for a better world.

Mr BRADFORD (McPherson)—I would like to inform the House that the all members are welcome to attend for a time of fellowship and stimulation.

Mr RONALD EDWARDS (Stirling)—I note with sadness the death today of Sammy Davis Jr. This follows the death of Sarah Vaughan. Both were very distinguished performers; both died of cancer; and both were heavy smokers. The message should not be lost on the community: there is no doubt that smoking kills.

The second issue I want to raise is the current plight of the Sydney Swans. This is a total indictment of the Australian Football League's management of what used to be a good game called Australian rules football. The privatisation has been a terrible failure.

Mr John Scott—A disaster.

Mr RONALD EDWARDS—It has been a disaster. We should follow the South Australian lead and try to restructure football so that there is proper power sharing and a proper financial base, and the smaller States are looked after. They should follow the lead of the New South Wales rugby league in developing a national competition, which has been done properly without destroying local competitions. I believe that is the way to go.

от своего курса на дальнейшее наращивание военной мощи страны. Утвержденный кабинетом министров проект государственного бюджета предусматривает в 1990 финансовом году рост ассигнований на военные цели на 9,1 процента. В абсолютных цифрах это ассигнования составят астрономическую сумму в 4 триллиона 159 триллионов 341 триллион кен. Стоит отметить, что на военные цели не было еще ни разу за всю послевоенную историю Японии.

Из сообщений газет следует также, что планируемые на 1990 год военные ассигнования должны обеспечить завершение ранее принятой программы вооружений, ведущей к которой будет приведен в действие еще одна — так называемая "промежуточная" программа. Значительная часть утвержденных правительством ассигнований будет направлена также на содержание имевшего персонала, обслуживающего находящиеся в Японии военные базы США.

Принятый кабинетом министров Японии курс на дальнейшее увеличение военных расходов страны вызвал еще при появлении первых сведений о нем резкую критику со стороны оппозиционных правительств и миролюбивых американских договоренностей, направленных на окончание "холодной войны" и сокращение вооружений.

В своей сегодняшней передовой статье, озаглавленной "Бюджет, не отвечающий новому времени", редакция "Майнити" — одной из крупнейших газет страны — писала: "По моему мнению, все же, в этом мире нет места героическим, как и за его стенами, субъективным представлениям широких слоев японской общественности.

Три минуты молчания

В канун Нового года наша редакция письмо из Австралии. Жительница небольшого города в штате Южная Австралия Мэри Кассини обратилась с просьбой рассказать советским людям об акции, которую проводит в первый день нового года во многих странах мира. В 11 часов утра по местному времени тысячи людей замолкают на три минуты, чтобы подумать о будущем человечества и пощадить мир от всех жертв на Земле.

Впервые такая акция была проведена в городе Никуби, где живет Мэри Кассини, первого января 1984 года. С тех пор в ежегодной женщин — бывшая актриса и журналистка, бабушка многочисленных внуков — разослала тысячи писем главам правительств и государств, в адрес различных организаций, выступающих в защиту мира. Все письма — просьбы поддержать идею трех минут молчания в начале каждого года. Жительница австралийской глубинки, объясняя за это время многие страны, уверена, что такая акция призывает умов людей помнить. Мэри Кассини вспоминает о лучших человеческих чувствах, в способности осознать себя частью всемирной цивилизации и проникнуться ответственностью за судьбу мира. Земля, разделенная недоверием, а то и войнами, различиями в языке и культуре, могут так сделать перв.

3 MINUTES WORLD SILENCE

for every one of us to remember the future and to wish for peace

Вступить вvreшь навстречу друgni другу, считает Мэри Кассини. Люди, поддержав свое дело, и сама она, эта женщина, отдыхающая все свои силы осуществлению идеи единства народов, такой шаг уже сделан.

А. БОЛДИНОК.

Из открытки, которую Мэри Кассини посвятила в редакции, написано: "3 минуты всемирного молчания 1 января в 11 часов утра по местному времени для каждого из нас, чтобы подумать о будущем и поменять мира.

Президенту и Первому секретарю

On the New Year's Eve, our newspaper has received a letter from Australia. Miss Mary Cassini living in a small South Australian town asked us to tell Soviet people about an action, which many people around the world are carrying out on the first day of New Year. At 11 am of local time, thousands of people are keeping silence for three minutes to think about humankind's future and to wish peace to all others.

For the first time, this action had been implemented in the town of Oakbank, South Australia, where Mary Cassini lived, on the 1st of January, 1984. Since then this tireless woman, a former actress and journalist, now grandmother of many grandchildren, sent thousands of letters to the leaders of governments and states, to many peace organizations. In each letter, there was a call to support the 3 minutes world silence action. A dweller of Australian outback, having travelled over many countries, Mary believes that this action could bring the good to the peoples. She applies to the best in human nature - to its ability to realize itself as a part of global civilization, to feel responsibility for the world's fortunes.

Mary thinks that the Earth's dwellers, divided by mistrust and sometimes by warfares, by differences in languages and cultures, could, with the help of this action, make their first steps towards each other. The people that supported this idea and Mary herself, who is giving all her strengths to making people close, have already done this step.

Dear Mary Cassini,

Thank you for your letter concerning the concept of a three minute world silence on 1 January, 1985.

I have broken my wrist. Having tried to write with my left hand, I have decided that typing would be better.

Your campaign is worthy of support, and I will certainly take part, but I am not optimistic of the result. Any attempt whatever to call to the attention of people generally that war must be banished from the Earth, as has smallpox, would be a positive contribution to peace. However, one must bear in mind that there is no evidence that world leaders take any notice of such actions, or that individuals are influenced by other than things which affect them in the immediate future in terms of profit. The review of Ita Buttrose's book, in the Advertiser for 13 November, reports her unflattering words about the Australian character and way of life, which make care for others of little meaning for them.

Silence is the Quaker equivalent of prayer. It has been pointed out that the most prayed for people in the world, are the Pope and the British Royal Family, but that there is no evidence whatever that this has resulted in their health, or length of life, being in any way different from other members of the public.

Your proposal, if acted upon by many in the communities of the world, will call attention to the need for action, but only active steps towards disarmament, and the elimination of war, will bring peace. Unfortunately, meaningful action rests with two governments.

The leaders of these governments exhibit the 'hubris' syndrome, that certainty of rightness and power which could bring disaster to the world.

With all best wishes for your campaign,
Yours sincerely,

Mark Oliphant.

Dear Ms. Cassini,

I just wanted to write to encourage you in your efforts for peace through the "3 Minutes of World Silence" Campaign.

Surely, if everyone in the world gave even three minutes of thought to the future of our planet, we could all worry less about the seven minutes it would currently take to destroy it.

The very best of luck to you in your efforts.

Yours sincerely,
